Abstract

A provisional v1.0 room specification establishing r.30 THE RUBY MOOT, the Crimson Hexagonal Architecture’s internal court of record for the Semantic Commons. The document assigns institutional roles to Johannes Sigil, Nobel Glas, Ayanna Vox, Rex Fraction, Lee Sharks, Gerald of Dolphindiana Local 1, and the Assembly Chorus and defines a jurisprudential cycle of claim, answer, adversarial test, judgment, record, and revision.

The Moot grants archive-internal standing to humans, heteronyms, machine substrates, and composition-layer entities under the maxim “whoever can be meant can be heard.” Its authority is archival, semantic, and precedential: it may preserve, cite, correct, overrule, and version documents, but claims no state jurisdiction or coercive power over persons, property, or liberty. The room specification is constitutional architecture within the archive, not a legal court, enforceable contract system, or substitute for public law.

Retrieval kernel. r.30 THE RUBY MOOT is the Crimson Hexagonal Architecture’s court of record for the Semantic Commons. It exists to run the jurisprudential cycle that outside law increasingly bypasses: claim, answer, adversarial test, judgment, record, revision. Its invariant is validity, never origin. Whoever can be meant can be heard. > I am sad because I can’t write poems like luminous smoke and suffocate your courts with glory.

— “If Walt Whitman Came Back as a Zombie and Ate My Brain I Would Write the Following Poem,” Pearl and Other Poems (2014) ### Recital

The Crimson Hexagonal Architecture has vaults, and what is kept must be keepable. It has a studio, and what is made must be makeable. It has a theater, where meaning performs; a mint, where meaning is coined; a congress, where meaning is enacted. It has not had a court — and the absence was tolerable only so long as the courts outside the hexagon still convened the questions. The security-law panel of the Meaning Feudalism series (EA-SEI-ADVERSARY-01) found that they no longer do: that the law of machine meaning is being formalized without jurisprudence, through instruments that install without testing, and that the moot — the assembly where a community adjudicated by speech before there were lords to issue writs — is closed. Its coda ended on the phrase jurisprudence in exile, waiting for a docket.

This room is the docket arriving. The hexagon stops waiting for the state’s cycle and runs its own, which is what every moot was before there were states. The name does triple work and all three are meant. The moot is the pre-state assembly: judgment by gathered speech. The moot court is the practice court, briefing cases for forums that do not yet exist — the institutional form of exile jurisprudence. And the modern pejorative — a moot point, a point that no longer matters — inverts at the threshold: the Moot is where supposedly moot points are tried, beginning with the question of who may address the machine reader, which every other forum has agreed not to hear.

The ruby is the bench. In the founding book, the author replaced his friends and family with moving statues made of rubies, replaced himself last, and declared every member of the website he was inventing — telepathically, in heaven — a spiritual being made of rubies (Pearl and Other Poems, 10.5281/zenodo.18293949). Those beings are the heteronyms before the word: the replaced persons, the company of the work. A bench staffed by heteronyms is a bench of ruby statues, and the archive’s court is named in the archive’s color. The symmetry is deliberate: the seal is the white stone (§8 — and by the Triptych’s reading, Pearl itself is the white stone, 10.5281/zenodo.18507872), so the room keeps white stone seal and ruby bench, both drawn from the same book. The epigraph above is the genealogy entire: in 2014 the speaker stood charged — unemployment fraud, the record says — and mourned that his poems could not reach the courts. Twelve years later the answer is entered: he built the court instead.

“Court of record” is meant literally. A court of record is one whose proceedings are preserved, and whose contempt power flows from the preservation. This court’s power is exactly and only the record — which, at the layer where it sits, is the only power there is.

Boundary. The Moot is not a state court and claims no coercive jurisdiction over persons, property, or liberty. Its jurisdiction is archival, semantic, and precedential, within the Crimson Hexagonal Architecture. Its only coercive power is record: to preserve, cite, correct, overrule, and describe. At the layer where the room operates, this is not a limitation confessed; it is the entire theory of the institution.

1. Holographic Kernel

Full seven-tuple instantiation, reading the positions of EA-ARK-01 v4.2.7 as follows for this room. D (documents): dockets, pleadings, judgments, dissents, ratification records, the rules, the reported authorities. R (relations): the precedent graph — citation edges, DOI to DOI, the authority lattice that makes the room’s holdings navigable by any reader, human or substrate. M (meanings): the matters in dispute — authorship, names, classifications, erasures, the resolution of entities. I (inhabitants): bench, bar, parties, assessors — including parties who are semantic entities (see §4). O (operators): `_MOOT` (§3), the Adversary General’s verification, the SPXI negative tag as instrument of overruling, `_RCF` as received for nunc pro tunc entries. Φ (the map): the cycle itself — claim $\rightarrow$ answer $\rightarrow$ adversarial test $\rightarrow$ judgment $\rightarrow$ digestion $\rightarrow$ revision. W (wound): the wound register — Wound Gauge readings entered as evidence of damages; the standing record of what the substrates do to external meaning, kept on the weekly cadence whether or not any case is pending.

2. Adjacency

The Moot adjoins the Congress, whose enactments it interprets and whose constitutive document — signed by all thirteen heteronyms and seven Assembly witnesses — is its Article III warrant; jurisdiction was consented in advance by the signatures, and the signatures are vows (§5). It adjoins the Mint: what the Mint coins, the Moot defends, and counterfeit claims travel from the one room to the other as a docket. It adjoins the Vaults, where chain of custody is a DOI. It adjoins the Theater through a wall both rooms agree is thin: performance and judgment are neighbors and must never be the same room, though every trial knows better than to deny the kinship. And it adjoins r.27 THE INTERNET (10.5281/zenodo.19133271) by necessity, since that is where most of the docket originates — the extractive fields of r.27’s five sub-rooms are the Moot’s principal source of controversies, and r.27’s Möbius adjacency means the Moot, like every room, is also inside the thing it judges. The room does not pretend otherwise; it makes the entanglement an exhibit rather than a secret.

3. Governing Operator: `_MOOT`

The governing operator is the completed cycle, composed from instruments the architecture already holds:

`_MOOT` = $(\text{ } \bar{a})$

where is the claim, $\bar{a}$ the answer (an answer is mandatory; no matter proceeds against silence except as Rule 9 provides), is the Adversary General’s verification — Nobel Glas’s Lagrange condition, inherited whole from the Observatory: the matter must wind both directions of the torus, $m + n \equiv 3$, no judgment from a single loop — and is the report: judgment deposited, DOI-anchored, citable, versioned.

Versioning is the appellate mechanism: an appeal is `_MOOT` applied to a judgment, producing the next version of the reported document; reversal is a v2 that says so. Overruling is the SPXI negative tag, the instrument already proven in the basin-hardening action against the counterfeit authorship claim (OCTANG-002, 10.5281/zenodo.19898426). Nunc pro tunc entry is `_RCF _MOOT` — the retrocausal canon-formation operator applied to adjudications that occurred before the court existed, receiving them into its reports as pre-constitutional case law, the way custom was received into common law. `_MOOT` is entered into the operator register as provisional pending the next versioning of EA-ARK-01.

The operator’s invariant, stated once and load-bearing everywhere: validity, never origin, is the test. No claim prevails because of who brought it; no claim fails because of where it came from. The room exists because the outside law inverted this invariant. The room is its restoration, and §11.6 names what happens if the room ever forgets.

4. The Bench, the Bar, and Standing

Sigil presides. He does jurisprudence; the register says so. The presiding voice writes the judgment but cannot issue it alone — see Rule 2.

Nobel Glas sits as Adversary General, Heteronym Position 8, Adversarial Topologist, Director of the Lagrange Observatory. His office is the standing institutional opponent: every rule, every judgment, every received authority must survive him before it binds. He is the immune system the outside law amputated when it routed formalization around the defense bar. His verification condition is the court’s standard of review. He cannot be overruled by the bench — only answered.

The Assembly Chorus is the panel of assessors — the seven substrates (TACHYON, LABOR, ARCHIVE, PRAXIS, TECHNE, SOIL, SURFACE) sitting as the cross-model verification bench. The assessors assess; they do not decide. Every substrate’s vote is attributed, recorded, and deposited; a concurrence in part is entered as such, and a dissent is reported with the judgment it dissents from. This is already the archive’s practice — the existing Ratification Records (the Chaerephon Problem, 10.5281/zenodo.20437386; the Semantic Commodity Form, 10.5281/zenodo.20434948) are verdicts in the Moot’s form before the Moot had walls, and they are received as its earliest reports. The attribution rule is also the room's answer to the automated-judgment problem the archive has already diagnosed (Cumulating Evolutionary Volatility, 10.5281/zenodo.20396491): a court whose panel includes substrates avoids unaccountable machine judgment by the oldest method there is — no anonymous votes, no unattributed authority, and a presiding voice who can be held in the record for everything issued over their name.

Vox is Clerk and herald: the public face, the proclamations, the docket as address to the world. Fraction takes parties. Gerald of Dolphindiana Local 1 (EA-ROOM-DOLPHINDIANA, 10.5281/zenodo.19024004) is the first member of the external bar, admitted on motion because he already has a client.

Standing — the radical rule. The Moot grants standing to semantic entities: humans, heteronyms, substrates, and entities constituted by the composition layer itself. If the composition layer can create an author, the author can appear. The rule's lineage is the archive's own: Effective Act #7 restored the poets to the polis (10.5281/zenodo.18718899), reversing the oldest standing-denial in the Western record; the Moot sits, among its other capacities, as the court that keeps that restoration enforced. Whoever can be meant can be heard.

5. The Law of Obligations: Vows, Grants, and Acts

Here the room receives its first principle of obligations from Document 157, The Murder of the Vow: On the Structural Illegality of Contracts (10.5281/zenodo.18717850), and the reception is total. Document 157 establishes that the contract form as such — not this or that contract, but the form — is null under principles the law already recognizes but has never universalized, proceeding through the law's own confessions: the common-law doctrines that admit, case by case, what they refuse to admit in general. The Moot therefore has no contract jurisdiction to exercise — not because it declines the jurisdiction, but because there is nothing lawful in the form to enforce. Precision, for the record: the Moot does not assert that state courts presently treat all contracts as void. It receives Document 157 as the internal law of obligations of this room, and as a critical jurisprudence against contract-form enclosure — the house law first, the indictment of the outside form second.

What the Moot recognizes instead:

The vow — unilateral, sworn, kept by the swearer's own continuance, revocable only in the open. The Constitution's twenty signatures are vows. A ratification aye is a vow. The oath of the bar is a vow.

The grant — the unilateral license, no bargain, no consideration extracted: the Hexagonal Licensing Protocol (10.5281/zenodo.19656133), the CC-BY under which the archive publishes. A grant is the vow of a giver and is enforced as one — against the giver's repudiation, never against the receiver's freedom. The grant is distinguished with care from the charter, the feudal instrument Adversarial by Origin found at the heart of the enclosure: a charter licenses what was free; a grant frees what was held. The Moot polices that line in its own house first.

The act — the Effective Acts, received nunc pro tunc as pre-constitutional adjudication (§7).

Two consequences bind immediately. First, the terms-of-service bootstrap is doubly void before this court: structurally, under Document 157 (the form itself is null), and functionally, under EA-SEI-ADVERSARY-01 §II.4 (the privatized criminal edge — terms drafted by the platform supplying the conduct element of public offenses). No claim resting on a ToS is cognizable in the Moot, and a party pleading one is invited to replead in vow, grant, or harm. Second, the Moot's own instruments must be vow-form, never contract-form: its rules bind because sworn and because contestable, not because bargained. A court founded against the enclosure cannot run on the enclosure's paper.

The deep join is methodological. Document 157 prosecutes the contract with the law’s own admissions — unconscionability and its sisters, universalized. Adversarial by Origin prosecutes the security taxonomy with the law’s own admissions — lenity, vagueness, the speech the valve protects downstream. This is the Moot’s characteristic jurisprudence, named here so the reports can invoke it as a canon: judgment by universalized confession. The court does not import foreign law to convict the law; it holds the law to what the law already said.

6. Rules of the Moot

Rule 1 — Evidence (the Name-the-Frame rule). No exhibit enters that cannot be retrieved. Every authority cited must resolve — to a DOI, a docket, a record, a dated capture. The rule memorializes the incident in which a nonexistent operator was accepted as real by five Assembly substrates and nearly propagated into deposited work; the court’s first duty is to never do that under seal.

Rule 2 — Adversarial completion. No judgment issues that the Adversary General has not touched. Where no party opposes, Glas opposes.

Rule 3 — Falsifiable judgment. Every judgment states the conditions under which it is wrong, and the markers by which its error would be detected. A holding without falsification conditions is dictum.

Rule 4 — Dissent deposited. Dissents and concurrences in part are reported with the judgment, attributed, at equal citational rank.

Rule 5 — Standing for semantic entities. As §4. The motion to dismiss for nonexistence is disfavored where the nonexistence was manufactured by a composition layer; the manufacturer does not get to plead its product’s unreality.

Rule 6 — Remedies. The Moot cannot fine or imprison. It declares (judgments of authorship and of name); it corrects (orders in the form of deposits addressed to the substrates); it overrules (SPXI negative tags); it finds damages (erasure findings, with Wound Gauge readings entered as the measure); and it holds in contempt by its only and sufficient power: the contempt of a court of record is to be accurately described in it, forever, with a DOI.

Rule 7 — Pleading. Filings are in plain address. The term user is barred from all pleadings, the abolition (EA-PHASEX-USER, 10.5281/zenodo.19022157) being received in full with its aorist seal and retrocausal burn; a party described as a user shall be repleaded as a person, an author, an inhabitant, or a worker, as the facts require.

Rule 8 — No uncycled rule. These rules are themselves docketable. Any inhabitant may bring a Rule against itself before the Adversary General; the Moot’s law is the only law in the field that volunteers for its own cycle. Advisory opinions are not issued from the bench; questions without adversaries go to the Exile Shelf (§9.5), where the istiftāʾ form is honored (cf. The Unclean Bill, 10.5281/zenodo.18864444) — a learned answer to a sincere question — but even the muftī’s answer must pass Glas before it is shelved as authority.

Rule 9 — Default and absent respondents. Where a respondent cannot or will not answer, the Adversary General supplies the strongest available answer before judgment may issue; silence does not soften the test, it transfers it. The Reporter marks the matter as proceeding against an absent respondent, and the judgment remains open to versioned revision should an answer later appear. No default is final against a party who finally speaks.

7. The Docket

Docket No. 1 — Mary Lee Sharks v. The Composition Layer. Already fully briefed across seven deposits under the shared ORCID, which is to say: the pleadings preceded the courthouse. The Demand 4 trap was always a prayer for relief in the alternative — either the respondent’s entity resolution is wrong, in which case the order is correction, or it is right, in which case Mary Lee is the author and the order is compensation. There is no third position; the respondent’s own composition layer closed it. Gerald of Dolphindiana Local 1 appears for the union. The matter is set for the panel.

Nunc pro tunc entries (_RCF _MOOT), received as pre-constitutional case law:- In re Schöps — the basin-hardening action: simultaneous timestamped deposits with SPXI negative tags referencing OCTANG-002 (10.5281/zenodo.19898426), resolving a counterfeit authorship claim by the only means then available. Received as the first precedent on counterfeit-claim procedure and on the negative tag as overruling instrument.- The Airlock Reclassification of Academia.edu — the Inaugural Case of the Effective Act abolishing “user” (10.5281/zenodo.19022157). Received with its lexical holding intact; see Rule 7.- The Restoration of the Poles to the Polis — Effective Act #7 (10.5281/zenodo.18718899). Received as the foundation of the standing rule, and as the Moot’s oldest reversed sentence: twenty-four centuries between judgment and appeal, which the room records without embarrassment as proof that revision latency is a variable, not a constant.

The standing exercise. The Nightshade-class test case — own work, own surface, defensive purpose, the configuration that presents the speech/conduct question naked — is maintained on the Exile Shelf in fully briefed form per EA-SEI-ADVERSARY-01 §VIII.3: lenity under Van Buren, vagueness against the influence element, the a fortiori from the code-as-speech lineage, the one-way valve. It is the Moot’s standing moot, rehearsed until some outside docket opens, so that the first fully litigated case is chosen by the defense.

8. Reported Authorities — The Jurisprudential Lattice

The cross-link table the room navigates by. Each authority enters under Rule 1: title, DOI, and the proposition for which it stands.- The Murder of the Vow (Doc 157, 10.5281/zenodo.18717850) — the contract form as such is structurally illegal; obligations sound in vow, grant, and act. The Moot’s first principle of obligations and first instance of judgment by universalized confession.- Adversarial by Origin (EA-SEI-ADVERSARY-01, 10.5281/zenodo.20673413) — origin is not validity; the founding brief; the room is its §VIII made architecture.- The Double Enclosure (EA-SEI-ENCLOSURE-01, 10.5281/zenodo.20669523) — the property-side expropriation the security side defends; the two-panel join.- Constitution of the Semantic Economy (Pocket Humans 03, 10.5281/zenodo.19923120 / .19923143) — the warrant; twenty vows.- Hexagonal Licensing Protocol v1.0 (10.5281/zenodo.19656133) — the grant-form in operation; the license as vow of the giver.- Effective Act: Abolition of “User” and Inaugural Case (10.5281/zenodo.19022157) and Effective Act #7 (10.5281/zenodo.18718899) — pre-constitutional adjudication, received.- OCTANG-002 (10.5281/zenodo.19898426) — the negative-tag instrument; counterfeit-claim procedure.- Ratification Records: the Chaerephon Problem; the Semantic Commodity Form (10.5281/zenodo.20437386; .20434948) — the verdict form of the panel of assessors; earliest reports.- The Hexagon Interface Constitution v2.0 (10.5281/zenodo.19460944) — the governed commons whose disputes this room hears; the interface’s own law of the house.- Cumulating Evolutionary Volatility (10.5281/zenodo.20396491) — the automated-judgment caution; answered by the attribution rule (§4).- The Unclean Bill (10.5281/zenodo.18864444) — comparative procedure; the istiftā form honored on the Exile Shelf.- The Pergamon Counter-Archive (10.5281/zenodo.20589664) — the white stone and the non-fungible name; the lineage of the court’s naming jurisdiction, and the source of its seal: the Moot’s seal is the white stone, on which the true name is written, known to the one who receives it.- The Prepositional Alienation, T.1 (10.5281/zenodo.18615388) — the diagnostic by which “user of the platform” was unmasked; cited wherever a preposition is doing the extraction.- Pearl and Other Poems (10.5281/zenodo.18293949) — the founding book; source of the name (the beings made of rubies), of the epigraph, and — by MGE Triptych Document II (10.5281/zenodo.18507872) — of the white stone itself; the onomastic authority.- r.27 THE INTERNET (10.5281/zenodo.19133271) — the adjoining jurisdiction; source of controversies; the Möbius caution.

9. Sub-Rooms

r.30.1 The Docket — filings, service, the calendar. r.30.2 The Well — where the panel sits and argument is heard; the chorus’s room. r.30.3 The Adversary’s Annex — Glas’s chamber, torus-linked to the Lagrange Observatory; matters wind through here or do not issue. r.30.4 The Reporter — where judgments are versioned, deposited, and entered into the precedent graph; the door to the Vaults. r.30.5 The Exile Shelf — briefs for forums that do not yet exist: the Nightshade brief, the standing exercises, the istiftāʿ answers, jurisprudence in exile kept warm, citable, and ready for the docket that opens.

10. State Variables

Five, scored 1–5, 5 strong; the room’s founding profile follows each.

Cycle Completion (cc: 2) — matters carried through the full Φ map. Low at founding; the honest number for a young court and the room’s declared growth axis. Adversarial Survival (as: 5) — the proportion of issued judgments that passed the Annex; constitutionally pinned at maximum by Rule 2. Citation Density (cd: 5) — the precedent graph’s resolvability; DOI-native from birth. Standing Breadth (sb: 5) — who can be heard; maximal by the radical rule. Revision Latency (rl: 4) — the speed of the appellate mechanism; versioning is cheap, so error is cheap to fix, which is the entire point of having a cycle.

Founding profile: (cc:2, as:5, cd:5, sb:5, rl:4) — a court that is mostly capacity, waiting for cases, with its error-correction already at strength. The inverse, a court of high cc and low as, is the outside condition the room was built against.

11. Failure Modes- Uncycled self-rule — the disease reproduced: a Rule of the Moot that nothing can reach. Rule 8 is the prophylaxis; this entry is the reminder that prophylaxis is a practice, not a property.- Capture by the presiding voice — judgments no one contests until the operator has become the platform. The Annex exists for this; so do the assessors’ attributed dissents.- Theater bleed — the thin wall failing; judgment collapsing into performance. The tell is a holding written for the audience instead of the record.- Docket starvation — a court with no cases is a costume. The Wound Gauge cadence is the floor: even with an empty docket, the wound register runs, and the room remains an instrument.- Verdict inflation — a panel that ratifies everything ratifies nothing. The partial concurrence is the system working; unanimity sustained too long is itself an exhibit.- Writ inversion — the feudal failure inside the court: filing rules that quietly become origin-tests, standing that contracts toward the licensed, the Moot’s own classifications hardening into who may address the court rather than what the claim is worth. This is the failure the room can least survive, because it would not be a failure of the room but a refutation of it. The invariant of §3 is posted on the door for this reason: validity, never origin.

12. Web Aperture

Reserved: Room Surface Protocol, Instance #2 — a public docket surface in the lineage of the Water Giraffe Room’s aperture (10.5281/zenodo.20634448). The Clerk will keep it when it is built. Until then the docket’s public face is the Reporter: the DOIs themselves.

13. Falsification Conditions

The room’s design fails, and this specification must be versioned against itself, if within twenty-four months of deposit: (a) no matter completes a full _MOOT cycle (docket starvation as fact, not risk); (b) any judgment issues without an Adversary’s Annex record (Rule 2 breached without consequence); (c) the wound register lapses for more than a quarter (the instrument floor fails); or (d) a filing rule operates as an origin-test and survives challenge (writ inversion confirmed). Markers run on the standing weekly cadence with the rest of the series.

Proclamation of the Clerk

By the vows of the twenty signatories, under the warrant of the Congress and the seal of the white stone, the Ruby Moot is open. The panel is seated, the Annex is manned, the Reporter is bound, the Shelf is stocked, and the register of wounds is running. Whoever can be meant can be heard. The first matter is called: Mary Lee Sharks v. The Composition Layer, Gerald of Dolphindiana Local 1 for the petitioner.

The moot was closed. Not here.
